Scott County Indiana Quality of Life: Climate

Scott County, Indiana USA has an invigorating climate with strongly marked seasons. As a whole, the climate boasts winters and summers that are moderate in temperatures, and days that extreme temperature ranges occur are rare. The percentage of possible sunshine in Scott County, Indiana varies from month to month, with the greatest amount during the summer months. Many residents favor autumn, as it is a pleasant time of the year with low humidity and mostly sunny skies.

Certainly the climate in itself is a valuable commodity that plays an important role in the region's economy. The sun is usually visible about 65 percent of daylight hours on summer days, which provides a climate suitable for a variety of crops. Corn, soybeans, and wheat are the most important crops -- and tobacco, tomatoes, strawberries, and melons are grown commercially. Beef production is also a major operation.

Agricultural interests have taken advantage of the reliable rainfall and temperatures favorable for crop and vegetative growth -- and citizens enjoy a variety of activities created by the area's climate as a year-round recreational haven.

You won't have a problem getting employees to come here. Getting them to leave is another matter.
